EGGY ADDIS HONORED

AT BIRTHDAY PARTY
Mrs. Raymond N. Addis gave a dinner party of dairy appointments yesterday afternoon at her home in Race street in honor of her ninth anniversary of the birth of her little daughter, Peggy. The hours were from 3:30 to 6 o'clock. Twelve little girls friends of the honored guest were present and spent a most enjoyable afternoon at various games. There was a peanut hunt, Ruth Mitchell winning the first prize and Celia McFarland the second. A delicious luncheon was served at 5 o'clock, a color scheme of yellow and white being carried out in a most attractive manner. In the center of the table was a large birthday cake adorned with nine candles in pink rosebud holders, while at either end of the table were candleholders holding unshaded tall yellow candles. The favors were individual birdcage baskets adorned with one yellow candle, small yellow and white baskets filled with candy. Little Miss Peggy was the recipient of a number of beautiful gifts in remembrance of the happy occasion.

Mother and Daughter Meeting.

The annual mother and daughter meeting of the Woman's Misionary Association and the Oittersburg Guild of the United Brethren Church was held last night in the church. During the early part of the evening a separate business meeting was held by each organization. At the close the members and guests adjourned to the social room of the church where the exercises were held. Following delicious refreshments and a social meeting, a most attractive program in charge of Mrs. J. H. Bridgeman, wife of the pastor, was presented. While seated at the table the guests sang "Eliot Bo The Tie That Binds." Miss Lillian Osterwitz then read "The Parable of Girlhood." The next period was devoted to a "Hor Second Chance." The characters were Mrs. G. E. Leonard, president of the Woman's Misionary Association, Mrs. Ada Whippley, Mrs. J. H. Bridgeman, Miss Ethel Osterwitz and "Billy" Marlets. An impressive candle service followed. At either end of the table was a tall house candle, while at each place of the mothers was a white candle and of the girls, a yellow candle. The room was darkened and a group of girls, led by Miss Nina Elcher, entered. Miss Elcher carried a white lighted candle while the other girls carried yellow candles. Miss Elcher told the story of how Christ brought light into the world and of how it had glorified motherhood. After lighting the candle carried by the girls she asked the mothers to stand and light their candles from the house candle and repeat the mothers' pledge. The daughters were then asked to light their candles and repeat the daughter's pledge. "America" was sung after which the program closed with the benediction by Rev. J. H. Bridgeman. Mrs. Walter Laughrey was chairman of the social meeting.

Dinner at Country Club.
Charming in all its appointments was a dinner given last night at 6:30 o'clock at the Pleasant Valley Country Club by men members of the South Side Macros Club in honor of the ladies of the club. The menu consisted of the many good things which help to make a real chicken dinner. Following the dinner five games were called into play for euchre. Mrs. John W. McLean won the season prize and in playing off to us with Mrs. Warren L. Wright who captured last night's prize. Mr. and Mrs. H. George May were elected new members. Frank H. Graham of Sharon, formerly of Connellsville, was an out of town member present. The dinner marked the closing of the club season.

Regular Fraternity Meeting.
A regular semi-monthly meeting of the Unity Fraternity was held in the North Pittsburg Club room Monday evening at 8 o'clock. A heavy attendance is expected. A number of committee reports are to be heard.

Mary E. Dick Glass.
The Mary E. Dick Glass of the First United Presbyterian Church will meet Monday night at 7:45 o'clock at the home of Mrs. David Nixon in Hazelwood.

Aid Society Meets.
The Ladies' Aid Society of the First Baptist Church held its regular meeting last evening at the church. Following the devotional services, a splendid report was made by the treasurer and the visiting committee. During the business session, $7 was received from sales, a $5 gift was made by a member, and Mrs. Joseph Dixon and Mrs. J. C. McClellan paid $6 between money. An interesting feature of the evening was a "treasure basket" from which $6.16 was realized. Rev. W. H. Stewart gave a very interesting talk on plans for the future work to be done by the society, assisted by the Men's Bible Class. Two new members were received into the society. The next meeting will be held June 6.

Akers-Silger.
Announcement is made of the marriage of Miss Ellean Louise Akers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. M. Akers, of Houston avenue, and John Silger, son of Mrs. Orpha J. Silger of South Pittsburg street. The ceremony was solemnized Saturday, April 28, at Greensburg. The marriage came as a surprise to the many friends of the young couple. The bride was a clerk in Elrene's store previous to her marriage, while the groom is a civil engineer for the H. C. Frick Coke Company. Mr. and Mrs. Silger will reside with the latter's parents for the present.

N. E. I. A. Dance May 8.

A dance to be held by the Coke Region Division, West Penn Section, N. E. I. A., at the State Armory here, has been announced for Thursday evening, May 8. C. C. Gallagher is chairman of the committee.

Map Out of Date.
No action of any kind was taken last evening at the meeting of the City Planning Commission. An old city map, unprinted by the city engineer, was inspected. It needs extensive additions, having been made in 1905.

Reception at Vanderbilt.
A reception was held at the James Cochran Memorial Methodist Episcopal Church of Vanderbilt yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock in honor of Miss Mary A. Collins of Pittsburgh, head of the Woman's Home Misionary Society, by the Vanderbilt society. Covers were laid for 20 at dinner. Miss Collins delivered an address on "The Light of the World" at 7:30 o'clock at the church. Miss Grace Tolcher presided. Ten life recruits in misionary work were present. Misses Edith and Adele Haublin, Helen and Daniel Hamilton, Carrie Ette Herbert, Grace Tolcher, Anna Mae Newall, Genovive Shamborger, Burndene Gray and Lucy Shamborger.

Dennis-Mitchell.
Announcement is made of the marriage of Miss Ethel Jane Dennis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Amos Dennis of Oliphant, and Lauder Edward Mitchell son of Mr. and Mrs. Amos Mitchell of Oliphant, solemnized Wednesday, April 23, in Oakland, Md., in the home of Rev. Buckley. In the absence of Rev. Buckley, Dr. Moore officiated. Mrs. Harry Frazee, a sister of the bride, Smithfield, was the only attendant. The bride wore a blue traveling suit and hat to correspond. After spending a few days at the home of Mrs. Jeanie Dillier of Oakland, a cousin of the bride, the couple motored to Smithfield, where they spent a few days before going to Colonial, where the bridegroom is employed by the H. C. Frick Coke Company.

Township Teachers Meet.
The regular monthly meeting of the elementary school teachers in Dunbar Township meeting was held in the Dunbar Township High School today, whose instructions for the next school period were given by Superintendent R. K. Smith. This is the last meeting for this year. The last writing lesson for the term was given by P. O. Peterson, writing supervisor.

MANY GUESTS ATTEND

EASTER STAR DANCE
A social event of prominence was the annual May dance of the Connellsville Chapter, Order of the Easter Star held last night in the State Armory. More than one hundred couples were in attendance and enjoyed dancing from 9 to 11 o'clock. Those who cared not to dance played cards. The hall was attractively decorated for the occasion. A color scheme of red, white and blue predominated and formed a pretty background for the many beautiful gowns in evidence. Streamers of the colors were draped from the central light on the sides of the hall, while shades of the same colors adorned the lights. Delightful refreshments were served. Kitterle's orchestra played. Our town guests were from Uniontown, Scottdale, Dunbar and Dawson.

George-Anderson.
Miss Mildred George, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank M. George of Youngwood, and Harry L. Anderson, son of Mr. and Mrs. James L. Anderson of Midway, were married Thursday afternoon at the home of the bride. Rev. Victor A. Ruth officiated.

WHY TAKE CHANCES

Don't Neglect a Bruise, Cut or Sore.
It Can Easily Become Infected and cause you endless trouble. It is with pleasure that I write you in reference to the wonderful results I receive from using San Cure Ointment & Salve in the palm of my hand of two years standing. After having used all kinds of advertised preparations as well as several prescriptions with no result I finally turned to San Cure Ointment and after a few applications my long standing sore was entirely cured. Cannot say enough in praise of it!—Mrs. R. E. White, 12 Elly St., Rochester, N. Y.

San Cure Ointment and Soap are just as effective for Pilon, Sciatica, Bell's Palsy, Ulcers, Chapped Hands or Face, San Cure Ointment and Soap, 30c and 60c, at Connellsville Drug Co., Connellsville, or Broadwater Drug Co., Scottsdale.—Advertisement.

Frank Graham Pays Visit.

Frank N. Graham of Sharon, who motored here last night to attend the dinner given last night at the Pleasant Valley Country Club by the South Side Exchange Club, returned home this morning. He was accompanied by his son, James.

Grim Reaper

MRS. LUCY ORR LOWRY.

Mrs. Lucy Orr Lowry, 78 years old, well-known resident of the South Side, died this morning at 3:30 o'clock at her home at 105 Porter avenue, where she had been critically ill for several weeks. Death was caused by infirmities of age.

Mrs. Lowry had been a resident of Connellsville for 20 years. She came from Mayville, Ky., where she was born September 29, 1846, and where she had lived to the time of her coming to this city. She was a daughter of George W. and Maria Greenhill Orr. She married Theophilus Lowry, a Kentucky tuckerman, who died in Mayville about 30 years ago. Mrs. Lowry continued to reside at Mayville for 10 years and then came to Connellsville and for 10 years made her home with a daughter, Mrs. Lila Kinard of 106 Cedar Street. At the end of that time she bought a property in Porter avenue and had since lived there with her other daughter, Mrs. Lucy Davis. There were five children in the family but three are dead. The only other relative here is a granddaughter, Max Gladys Haucke.

Only the privileged few wore glasses in the days of "Scaramouche"

Today, the preservation of the eyesight is made possible to everyone.

Fitted Glasses Are Becoming

Glasses correctly selected need not mar your appearance, in fact they may add to it if chosen wisely. Don't take chances! Eye strain is very dangerous! Recurrent headaches are perhaps the most common indication of eye strain but there are hundreds of others. I have spent years studying the causes and the proper treatment of eye strain, and have given relief to many Connellsville people. You don't take a chance when you have your glasses fitted here—you know they're correct.

Fire Destroys Schrock Barn Near Reidmore

Fire last night destroyed the barn of Amosine Schrock, back of Reidmore, and for a time threatened his residence but heroic efforts on the part of the South Connellsville fire department, which formed a bucket brigade saved the structure and prevented further spread of the flames.

The midnight blaze was a spectacular one. The farm is on a hillside and the fire could be plainly seen for miles around. From the South Side it resembled a huge break fire.

The flames were discovered by Jack Burnworth, a Baltimore & Ohio collector. He was in South Connellsville at the time. Running to the house of Burgess Keffer he awoke him and then summoned Fire Chief S. C. Miller. Telephoning the West Penn power house he had the South Connellsville fire whistle blown and this quick work made it possible to get enough men out in a short time to form the bucket brigade.

The livestock was saved, with the exception of the poultry. Some hay and grain were also consumed by the fire. The barn was completely destroyed.

The Connellsville Fire Department was called but was unable to get to the flames with the truck.

What Do You Pay For?

When you purchase a battery you have to pay for several things. The first is "pep"—the ability to turn over the engine no matter how stiff it may be. Another is the life of your battery—the duration of time that it will give faithful service. Be sure you are getting these things! You're paying for them so be sure you get them. The EXIDE Battery gives you all of these and more. And it is priced as low as a cheap battery.

Auto Accident Statistics No Aid to Prevention—Grouping of Causes Carries No Specific Message to Average Driver—How Accidents Are Avoided Reveals Importance of Contributing Causes—only "Story" in Statistics Paints Need For Facts.

By WILLIAM ULLMAN

Is the publication of automobile accident and fatality statistics helping to curb the evil of the misdirected motor car?

This question has been raised by many experts at a time when there was never greater need for prevention of traffic disasters. The country is being flooded with figures that purport to help safeguard motoring and walking America through keeping ever in mind the dire results of overlooking this indispensable feature, but it is pointed out that about all the publication of statistics has created is a mania for more of them.

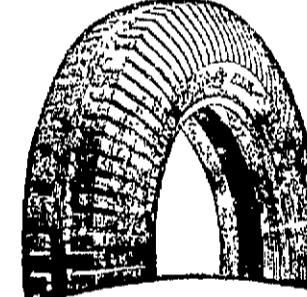

We've had the figures now let's have the facts, many are saying.

The only "story" in accident statistics is the fact that the proportion of undesirable at the wheel of an automobile is increasing. If anything else is read from statistics gross errors are quite likely to be made, with accident prevention dangerously distorted as a direct consequence.

For example, majority of fatal complications are listing "speeding" as the primary cause of fatal accidents while the fault lies with the driver. Most motorists who read such statements will immediately associate "speeding" with "driving fast." Many of them will decide to keep the car below thirty, never realizing that they may be "speeding" at ten, depending upon conditions.

Leaders in this movement to get down to brass tacks on the subject point to the fact that enough statistics have been widely circulated for the

Why Did They Do It?

When 110,000 people purchase a car that was unheard of two years ago there must be an excellent reason. The Durant, in two years time has attained a popularity that other cars much older have never attained. This was possible because of two things: First, the excellence of the Durant itself; its sturdy construction and powerful engine. Second, because its maker, Durant, is recognized as one of the leading automobile manufacturers and engineers in the country.

Drivers Must Be Anticipatory

from accident data that "children playing in the street" represent a constant hazard and that the little ones must be constantly considered, but it doesn't seem to curb this variety of accident. The average driver needs the vision of the car operator just mentioned who considered the pavement as well as the street. Seeing the child trip and the whoop roll away toward the street he had vision enough to anticipate that the child would run after it.

The distinction between "pedestrian" and "automobile" accidents is well enough for a technical summary of accidents, but for the motorist who is trying to rid motor transportation of its blight the distinction does not really exist. If a pedestrian suddenly retraces his steps at a crossing, runs across heedlessly or faints directly in the path, the driver who is caught in an accident is still a contributing cause. He should know enough to anticipate what may happen.

What, for instance, does "confusion" mean to a driver as a cause of accidents or fatalities? Will it make any difference to him in his operation of the car today whether he reads that "confusion" is responsible for 10 per cent of the total accidents or 99 per cent? Will he say to himself, "I must not be confused?" Will he give the matter some serious thought before he again takes the wheel, or will he promptly forget the matter?

Contrast all statistics you have ever read on the subject with the following incident.

An experienced motorist, reached the intersection of two streets just as another car approached from the left. According to the laws of the particular State the first driver had the right of way. At this point the driver of the car to the left became confused, stepped on the accelerator instead of the brakes and came shooting across first.

The first driver could have stopped in time to avoid a collision when the other driver first showed signs of doing something out of the ordinary but he acted too late.

This accident was reported as a matter of "confusion" of new driver. But the point is, would there have been any collision had the first driver been competent enough to keep in mind the fact that more than five million car operators have had less than two years experience and that every truly experienced driver has got to look out for them?

When the fatality figures of a certain community are compiled for April they will show three additional deaths that will fall under the category of "speeding." Thousands of people will read the figures, yet never know the facts. Too young men in a high-powered car running at terrible speed across a wide boulevard can head on into an approaching street car in broad daylight. Their criminal recklessness was the primary cause of what happened, but if just one of the contributing causes had been eliminated the fatality might not have happened.

This contributing cause was the carelessness of the police in halting the speeding car. An effort was supposed to have been made in one town to have the car stopped in the next. The distance is seven miles, the towns well populated, the motor traffic considerable. Statistics will never develop the work of safeguarding the innocent by enforcing the laws.

Let's have the facts!

"Every one believes that. The woman shows it in lots of her talk. There's no other explanation for the way she goes after you. The town was stirred up a bit over Alton's death for a day or so, but now decent folks are glad he's dead. If you go back and quiet down no one will trouble you."

"Sam Judd tells every one you and he are to blame. He wants to supply his family. That catches every one's fancy. Six men killed by Indians within four miles of Deadwood since you went away. Patrick and Sambury offer five hundred reward for the capture of any man who helped run off twenty head of their best stock from the French Creek station. They threaten to stop their stages if the horse thieves aren't caught pretty soon. So you see the Indian has other things on his mind besides you and your doings."

"I see. Any strangers in town?"

Scholars gaped in mild amazement. "Strangers? Why, you just know they're coming and going all the time. Only they don't go far because of the Indians."

"Scholars puffed his pipe in silence for a minute, then asked:

"Did you hear anything about a fellow called Omaha?"

Scholars pursed his lips and screwed up his wrinkled features in an effort to remember. Then he slowly said:

"Name sounds familiar. Maybe it's because of the city by that name. Queen never for a man to have."

His face lapsed into meditation and did not hear the rambling talk of his companion, including a lengthy explanation of the various Sioux cuts. He revealed his abomination when he said this:

"See anything of the girl I brought out of Red Canyon? Little Carl is her name. She's staying with Widow Cott."

Scholars nodded eagerly.

"I've seen her on the street with Mrs. Cott. She's very good looking. And we all know something else—Kitty the Schenck went to the Cott house. The yellow seat out flying. They say Kitty was mad enough to chew up a harness. I'd forgotten all about that."

"So?" grunted Dinsdale. "How much more have you forgotten?"

"I don't know," was the frank reply. "Probably a lot. Since I became wakan I've got lots of foolish stuff."

"Please don't forget we're going back to Deadwood City. When do we strike for the gulch?"

"We've made the same road, and better," replied Sam Judd. "We're men on horseback, will strike east and trail along in two and three right into the gulch. Some of them will even sit riding into the town. Each one will be watching out for you. If we follow the middle branch of this creek to its head we'll be only a few miles south of Deadwood. There's an old trail that we can take."

"Lilac, Scholars; I'm not afraid of those horse thieves trying any game close to Deadwood. Let's take the most direct way to town. I'm keen to get back."

Scholars grinned cunningly. "Strike right out and have you get into a fight?" he said. "You'd say you'd killed a horse thief. How would you prove it? The town would say you're a natural-born gun fighter and always looking for trouble. They'd remember you left a dead man behind when you're out with Pyrites. It would never do to name your return with another dead man. Sam Judd Joe said just now, and it is this minute, that you couldn't stand him, another killing to your credit till the first one is forgotten. He has lots of influence in town, but he can't use 'em up on our men."

Dinsdale took a few raveling puns at his pipe and knocked out the heel, and surrendered.

"I'm not looking for trouble. I'm ready for the middle fork of this creek. We'll make town as soon as possible and without making the eagle scream."

"That's my notion," heartily assured Scholars. "Turning in? Thank I'll sit up a while and think things out. I don't sleep well. Too many dreams. Some are bad. Price a man pay for being what he is?"

Nor did Dinsdale rest well that night. The dream of Little Carl haunted him in the power of Kitty the Schenck, but Mayor Fournier suddenly turned into a savage of Sun Juan being killed in a fight. He was up early and wondering what could be the instigator with his nerves. He walked some distance from the camp in the hope that exercise would clear away his feeling of depression. He found when someone had dug into the marly shale, and, being ignorant of geology, was much surprised to discover fist spines and a cleft cephalopod in the broken formation. He carried his discoveries back to display to Scholars. The picture-man was setting out the last of their meat. Finishing his task he explained:

"Other Indians, while hunting for a new medicine, or the man with the seventy-four expedition shield. The expedition quit the hills along about there for the winter. Beaten but. We can visit the butte, too, if you care to. It's only five miles from here and a short distance beyond the middle fork, where we're bound for. Won't take more than thirty minutes to climb it. From the top we can see all over creation. If Easy and his friends are between us and Deadwood they'll be sure to have a camp and show a smoke."

The cynical name of Moto Tipi, rising abruptly from the plain to a height of twelve hundred feet, presented a singular appearance and one that appealed strongly to Dinsdale's taste for the unusual. Already it had distinct personality for him, like atmosphere resting on legends and the bolts of the red man. On being questioned Scholars said it was difficult to climb unless one followed paths from the northward or southward sides.

"Do you want to visit the top?" asked Dinsdale.

"Only for the sake of looking for a hostile smoke. If I do I want to go, as it was there, at the top of Moto Tipi, that I give the Oglala Teton the slip. I went with a hand to place small rocks in the trees in memory of the dead. I camp down the southeast slope in the dark."

"An hour or two won't make any difference. We'll climb it and have a look around," agreed Dinsdale.

Scholars brought up the horses and a side saddle brought them to the middle fork of the creek. Splashing through shallow water, Scholars led the way toward the southwest slope. As they advanced the mystery place became even more interesting. Dinsdale was surprised to discover he was approaching pleasure from the trip.

They dismounted at a stretch of scrub-spruce at the base of the butte, and Dinsdale was astounded at the abrupt change in his companion's deportment, including a lengthy explanation of the various Sioux cuts. He revealed his abomination when he said this:
